PROBLEM SOLVING FOR PARENTS - NRICH

A practical, hands-on session for parents wishing to support their children's mathematical development.

In the session Becky Warren, from Nrich, will be discussing recent research into maths anxiety, the power of a growth mindset and practical suggestions to help parents support their children throughout their school career. Whether you loved mathematics at school and need ways to enthuse your less than enamoured children or found your own experiences with the subject more challenging and are worried about passing on your anxiety, we will be looking at constructive ways to engage children of all ages and abilities. The NRICH website and its sister site Wild Maths are great places to source games and activities for all.

About NRICH

Becky comes to us from NRICH who are based in Cambridge, UK. The NRICH Project aims to enrich the mathematical experiences of all learners. To support this aim, members of the NRICH team work in a wide range of capacities.

To participate in the workshop, please email your name, school and mobile number to reception@dwec.ie
